

Left: In 1937, Dafoe took a position as a “dogsled doctor” serving remote mining communities in northern Saskatchewan. He is seen here standing outside the small, eight-bed hospital he designed and ran on his own in Goldfields.

Below: Making house calls at Goldfields, with his hospital in the background.

